OUTLOOK 2002 UPDATE: December 4, 2002 allows you to choose whether or not to use AUTO_UPDATE in Outlook. Once installed, the control panel will show the message (4228) "Microsoft Office Outlook Update for Outlook 2000 and Outlook 2002". On the Standard tab, there are two options: "No" which will not enable the update (allows all updates to be set to manual), and "Yes" which will enable the update (moves all updates to be set to automatic). NOTE: This update package also installs the "Microsoft Office Outlook Update for Outlook 2000 and Outlook 2002" installation information on your system. Important: This update package is designed to be installed only on a computer that has Windows 2000 or Windows XP installed and is not designed to be installed on a computer running other operating systems such as Windows 95, Windows 98, Windows NT, Windows ME, or Windows 98 SE. Therefore, for the update to be successfully installed on a computer that is running another operating system, the computer must be upgraded to Windows 2000 or Windows XP before the update is installed. Outlook 2003 Update: December 4, 2003 (is a specially-built upgrade package that is focused on a problem that would potentially lead to the application being blocked by external interferences. More precisely, there was a certain vulnerability that would make it possible for someone to send a malicious e-mail message which would result in rendering the current Outlook session unresponsive. In fact, Outlook 2003 Update is a technical update that is specifically designed to help users to deal with various issues that are related to the upgraded version of Outlook. This update package does not contain any features or enhancements, but it ensures that the version of the application being installed works as it should with the latest updates. This includes the ability to set it to check for updates automatically so as to ensure that the new features are downloaded as soon as they are released. Outlook 2003 Service Pack 1 (SP1) is a free upgrade that comes along with the Outlook 2003 Service Pack that is designed to be installed onto computers that are currently running Outlook 2002. SP1 is installed automatically as soon as the Service Pack is downloaded. This version of Outlook allows users to configure the preference center to check for updates automatically. Outlook 2003 Service Pack 2 (SP2) is a free update that comes along with the Outlook 2003 Service Pack that is designed to be installed onto computers that are currently running Outlook 2002 or Outlook 2003.
