Urology The Benner Foundation is a national, scientific initiative launched by the American Urological Association (AUA). The mission of the Benner Foundation is to advance urology science by using the principles of biochemistry, genetics and molecular biology to advance the study of normal and abnormal function of the urologic system and to refine the diagnostic and therapeutic modalities of diseases affecting the urologic system. The Benner Foundation's scientists seek to understand the fundamental biologic mechanisms involved in maintaining normal urinary tract function and distinguishing the changes that occur in diseased states. The Benner Foundation scientists then use this information to refine the diagnostic techniques and therapies available to our patients. The Benner Foundation is funded by an initial $15 million gift from the Delta Foundation of Tulsa, Oklahoma, which was given to the American Urological Association in 1958. More than half of this gift was used to fund a scientific research training program in Urology.

Hypoxic preconditioning alleviates cerebral ischemia/reperfusion injury through activation of oxidative phosphorylation in rat hippocampus. The present study investigates the effect of hypoxic preconditioning on the hippocampal N-methyl-D-aspartate receptor (NMDAR) activation and on the glucose and oxygen metabolism during cerebral ischemia/reperfusion (I/R) injury in rats. The present study also investigated whether the hypoxia-inducible factor-1 (HIF-1) contributed to the protection against the oxidative stress after the hypoxic preconditioning. Male Wistar rats were used for the experiments. A 4-hour hypoxic preconditioning was applied in a specially designed chamber. The rats that were subjected to a bilateral common carotid artery ligation for 2 hours and then subjected to reperfusion for 15 minutes were used as the I/R group. The rats that were subjected to an equivalent period of hypoxia were used as the sham group. The activities of superoxide dismutase (SOD) and the levels of malondialdehyde (MDA) in the hippocampal homogenate were measured. Western blot was used to detect the changes in the phosphorylation of ion channel protein in the NMDAR, and real-time reverse transcriptase polymerase chain reaction (real-time RT-PCR) was used to detect the messenger RNA (mRNA) expression of mitochondrial uncoupling protein-2 (UCP-2) and the level of ATP in the rat hippocampus. The results showed that hypoxic preconditioning markedly activated the NMDAR and its downstream signal pathways in the hippocampus, and the activation of NMDAR contributed to the inhibition of the oxidative stress after hypoxic preconditioning. Furthermore, the hypoxic preconditioning inhibited the decline of ATP and the increase of MDA level after I/R, and the results suggest that the hypoxic preconditioning inhibited the decline of ATP and the increase of MDA level after I/R through the activation of the NMDAR and its downstream signal pathways.

as the sun goes down on the last day at the download festival, one of the most anticipated stages opens. with the launch of two full stages and the countdown to the last day, there's never been a greater time to see the download festival. so, what will it be? will it be the 'no man' stage? the 'burger king stage'? the 'final fantasy' stage? the 'simon cowell' stage? or the not-as-exciting 'watermelon' stage?! it's up to you! let's find out! it's the start of the second day at the download festival, and already, there have been multiple low speed runs underway at the festival. in the first event of the second day, a record-breaking run by roman danylo made the news, breaking the present record set by dustin rolland. there was also a run by askai that all but snapped his legs off and set a new record on his way. all of the photos from today will be added into our photo gallery, and can be viewed by just.. click here!!! thanks to world of warcraft, we are being outed for the bullshit " terrorists " posing as innocent players who don't speak arabic. nuking a us citizen with no connection to terrorism isn't "violence" so much as it is a violation of us law. in particular, there is a risk of exploitation by authoritarian regimes, who often abuse social media to persecute political opponents and hold those in the general public in contempt. our goal is to protect the privacy of the more than two billion people around the world who use social media every day, despite any risk that might be associated with it. and that's how the electronic privacy legislation is working, right? 5ec8ef588b
